From the Oil Capital of North Dakota – Bakken Update – With Kathy Neset

Williston Basin Petroleum Conference

The Williston Basin Petroleum Conference was held in early May 2024 in Bismarck, ND. This is the largest gathering of oil and gas industry individuals in the region. The Conference brings together interested individuals from around the state, our nation, and even draws international interest. This year approximately 2400 people attended the event. Many Tioga and area companies were present, participated, and displayed exhibits at the trade show and conference. These types of events help to share professional ideas with technical talks and presentations as a mainstay of the event.

A hallmark of the event are the main stage speakers who present information that is front and foremost about what is going on in the world of oil and gas, and how it impacts and affects us here in northwest North Dakota. But an equally important part are the technical presentations that are done – sometimes by our own local experts – that bring the cutting-edge technologies to the public to learn from and to share.

NESET has participated in all these events at the Conference, and we take great pride in being one part of sharing the big story of how the oil and gas industry helps to promote national security by ensuring a safe and steady supply of domestic oil and gas production. It is also amazing to realize that so much of the technology that is developed right here in the Bakken – is then used and shared in other petroleum basins around the country and around the world. Right here in ND our companies are leading the way by developing cutting edge technology for the oil and gas industry.

We have mentioned previously, and we see in the news, information, and stories about Carbon Capture and Storage and Carbon Capture Utilization and Storage. This will continue to be an ongoing area of study as we develop this Bakken resource. CCS and CCUS will help to make our great resource of oil and gas even more valuable. The world needs more safe and efficient sources of energy to meet the growing population. We are truly blessed and in a special place here in North Dakota with the resources that we have beneath the surface. As Theodore Roosevelt alluded to and our Department of Natural Resources strives to provide safe and environmentally responsible use of these natural resources. NESET continues to work closely with the University of North Dakota EERC and several other entities and companies to study and develop safe and effective enhanced oil recovery of this great resource. Efforts continue in the study of rare earth elements, geothermal development, and other areas of energy development to meet the growing need. North Dakota has what we refer to as a geologic jackpot and this variety of formations and resources can be used to benefit all of us to bring energy security to our region and our country.
